New WASILC Chair

I am honored to serve as the new Chair of Washington State Independent Living Council. As a member of the Council for the last three years it's inspiring to reflect on our past accomplishments and the planning and implementation that it took to achieve them. In the midst of the SPIL season, I anticipate and embrace opportunities to continue to grow. The Council will continue to collaborate and strengthen partnerships, further integrate diversity and inclusion, and refine our advocacy efforts at a statewide level. I appreciate working with volunteer council members who are passionate about the Independent Living Philosophy and the mission it serves. This is the driving force behind what makes this a success and I hope to continue to hold that presence as we move forward.

Keith James, Chair of the Washington State Independent Living Council

Partner Updates

The Center for Independence (CFI) co-hosted three SPIL Forums with the SILC Director and staff in Vancouver, Marysville, & Lakewood. CFI has several robust youth programs which recently celebrated a Fall Fest. Additionally both offices are working with five high schools teaching advocacy, self awareness, and pre-employment skills. The Roads to Community Living program transitioned six people from nursing homes in the past 2-1/2 weeks and assisted a student with housing after receiving an eviction notice. Yearly, they host a harvest meal for Out & About support groups and prepare for the annual Christmas gifting program. Recently, staff provided an emergency preparedness and information presentation for the South Puget Inter Tribal Planning Agency and took part in an exercise at a local shelter to assess for accessibility in an emergency. It's a busy time of year!

Disability Action Center (DAC), NW hosted a National Career Mentoring Day for students ages 16-24 with a disability. The event was November 30th at Spokane Falls Community College. Career Mentoring Day is a nationwide effort to promote career development for students with hands-on exploration. "By matching students with mentors in our community, we can give them an opportunity to 'test drive their dream job'," says project coordinator Mels Felton, "This gives them the opportunity to get their hands dirty with an on the job experience." This is the first time CMD has been hosted in the Spokane area. The program is offered at no cost to the student or the schools. CMD hopes to give transitioning students the skills they need to pursue the employment or post-secondary education of their choice.

Travis Alert

In 2017, the Washington State Legislature passed SHB 1258, known as the Travis Alert Act, RCW 43.70.490. The law required the Department of Health (DOH) to collaborate with the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS), State Fire Marshal's office of the Washington State Patrol (WSP), Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI), and Washington State Council of Firefighters (WSCFF) to review existing training programs both local and nationally to design a state wide training program to familiarize fire department and emergency medical service personnel with the techniques, procedures, and protocols for best handling situation in which persons with disabilities are present at the scene of an emergency. The training is mandatory for all EMS personnel.

DOH brought together members of groups designated by the legislation as well as key partners from the disability community such as WASILC, Alliance of People with *dis*Abilities, DVR, and Thurston and King County among others. The disability partners provided the subject matter expertise on disability culture, language, and protocol for working with people with disabilities. The disability experts informed the curriculum for the two-hour training.

As part of the legislation, DOH is to provide a list of disability related organization and agencies on the DOH website. This website is voluntary. If you are interested in accessing and/or being part of this resource, the links are below:

Coalition on Inclusive Emergency Preparedness Update

Jim House, Disability Integration Manager for the Coalition on Inclusive Emergency Planning (CIEP), a program of WASILC, was one of two people selected by Region 10 of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to participate in the agency's Strategic Planning efforts for 2018 to 2022. FEMA's Region 10 is comprised of the states of Alaska, Idaho, Oregon, and Washington. FEMA will explore the effectiveness of its current policies, and develop new procedures to align with the following three goals outlined its Strategic Plan for 2018-2022:

1. Build a culture of preparedness where everyone should be prepared when disaster strikes.
2. Ready the nation for catastrophic disasters and enhance our collective readiness.
3. Reduce the complexity of FEMA to promote simpler, less complex processes to streamline the processes for individuals and communities to receive necessary support through its response lifelines.

What CIEP is mostly concerned about and advocated for is the steep loss of ADA expertise during disasters. We would like to see more disability specialists on the state and local levels as well and hope that FEMA will support us in this area. We must remember, that an ADA checklist for shelter accessibility is pretty much useless in the hands of someone without the experience of living with a disability, and does not really know what to look for. And it is not possible to evaluate access and functional needs if you are not on site. For information about CIEP you can either go to our emergency preparedness page <http://www.wasilc.org/EmergencyPlanningWorkshops/EmerPlnWrkshps.html> or reach out to Jim at housej@dshs.wa.gov.
